AUGUST 13

DANNY BONADUCE

Danny in Screen Gems' "The Partridge Family"

No one would ever take red-haired and freckled Danny Bonaduce, the 10-year-old youth who plays 'Danny' in Screen Gems' new half-hour family comedy series with music, "The Partridge Family", to be anything but an Irish lad. Yet, in reality, he comes from a 100 per cent Italian background.

Danny was born on August 13, 1959, in Broomall, Pennsylvania, a suburb of Philadelphia, and has a family of two older brothers and an older sister.

At age 11, Danny has two ruling passions in his life. He wants to become a great actor and to own his own mini-bike. An earlier ambition of owning his own horse has already been realized. And he spends every weekend riding the animal from morning to night. He calls it 'Patience' because his mother and father have said that Danny doesn't have any.

Danny is the only member of the family to have spent more time in California than in Pennsylvania because it was only shortly after his birth that his family migrated to the West Coast.

He attends school at Woodland Hills Elementary School where he is anything but the best student in the class. He is just an average American boy in everything he does – except acting, according to the teacher. He is in the fifth grade.

Some of his TV credits include: "The Ghost And Mrs. Muir", "My World And Welcome To It", "Bewitched", "The Good Guys", and "Mayberry, R.F.D".

He loves sports of all kinds whether he is participating or just watching. His favorite is basketball. ¤

MAY 22

JEREMY RUSSELL GELBWAKS

Chris in Screen Gems' "The Partridge Family"

Jeremy Russell Gelbwaks, one of the five children in Screen Gems' new half-hour family comedy series with music, "The Partridge Family", is a native of Hollywood, California.

Born May 22, 1961, Jeremy also lived in Seattle, Washington and Great Falls, Montana. Currently, his family resides in Canoga Park in the San Fernando Valley, where he is in the third grade at the Highlander Road Grammar School. Jeremy is the oldest of three boys.

At school he belongs to the Gifted Children's Association, the "Y" Guides Cub Scouts, and the grammar school drama class. He not only likes school, but he is one of the better students scholastically in his class.

For a nine-year-old-boy, he is kept busy with his many activities. He is taking beginning "karate" and drum lessons four times a week. In the Screen Gems series he plays drums for the Partridge Family musical group act.

For outdoor sports he likes to ski and go horseback riding. He also helps his father sail the family sloop.

Although he loves acting, Jeremy also enjoys writing and he hopes some day to become an important writer. He has already written his first play which will be presented at his school.

His father is an engineer and is employed at Computer Sciences Corporation. He also teaches at West Coast University. His mother is an ex-social worker and she currently is working on obtaining her master's degree in psychology at San Fernando Valley State College. ¤