

And that brings us to David Cassidy today . . .

If he has gone through the storm of success, he is now about to enter a new phase of his personal and professional life. Those who love him, who have watched him grow, are now anticipating David Cassidy's next move. He reflects back upon the years as Keith Partridge with a tremendous sense of pride and accomplishment. His commitment to his fans has never become tainted with cynicism. But he does recognize that the only thing constant in show business is change and growth and new horizons. And David Cassidy adapts well to change.

His thoughts professionally involve motion pictures and music that will offer people a greater insight into David Cassidy himself. He wants to write and compose. He wants to raise horses. He wants to act. He wants to build his own home, and even work with the land. David Cassidy likes to see things grow.

Just as his success could never have been predicted, could never have been planned, we can say very little about what the future holds. David isn't worried. He has arrived at a point in this life where the money is no longer important and the international recognition could never be surpassed.

So now it's his turn. Watch David grow.
