

lunch. The magazine photographers are waiting for him, though, and he may have to pose for pictures while he eats!

1:15pm Filming starts again, and it goes on until late afternoon.

8:30pm Everything stops for tea—but David hasn't finished yet. He's still got a recording session ahead of him, singing and playing those beautiful records of his.

12:00 midnight David goes home to bed, very, very tired. In bed he studies the film scripts for an hour to make sure he knows what is happening on the set tomorrow. Then, finally, at 1:00am he lays his head on the pillow for a long, 4½-hour sleep!

That's some day, isn't it? Although David loves what he is doing, he works a lot harder than most people, and he admits that it does leave him pretty tired.

Have you noticed anything? There's no room on that tight schedule for going out with girls. That's why David hardly ever has a girlfriend. Even when he plays live shows in other towns, he never knows anyone there, so he doesn't really have a chance to get to know any girls well. Of course, they would all like to go out with him, but he likes girls to go on dates with him because they like him, and not because he is David Cassidy, the big star. This sometimes makes him pretty lonely.

You'd better write to him and cheer him up—just to let him know he's got a real friend.
