

Have you ever seen David in concert?

You have? Then these super photos should bring back some happy memories!

You haven't? Then this is just a small sample of what you've been missing!

David is a fantastic concert performer, and he can really hold the stage for a full two or three hours, without his act ever slowing up, or beginning to drag. He's got a terrific voice, and he can go straight from a light, lilting ballad, into a fast, loud rock number.

And as for his stage outfits! Wow! They're just too much! Take a look at these super studded creations, not to mention the stunning white gear he's wearing in our cover photo.

AN EVENING TO REMEMBER

Just imagine taking your seat in a concert hall five or ten minutes before the show's due to begin. At last the lights dim, the compere announces him, and David walks onto the stage.

It's the beginning of a really great evening, worth all that frantic saving for the mobby to buy the ticket, all those weeks of waiting for the date of the show, wondering just what David's really like on stage, and whether he'll live up to your expectations.

And does he? Of course he does!

David gives his usual perfect, exciting, fantastic performance, and you love every minute of the show.

But at last, of course, the show has to finish, and David gives one or two encores before finally the curtain comes down and the lights go up.

David never likes to refuse encores, but he does have to get some rest. He has a very busy time, with shows and rehearsals and travelling, and though he'd love to go on singing all night, it just isn't possible.

So reluctantly you have to get up from your seat, leave the concert hall, and drift off home, to dream... of David, of course!

What a fantastic evening! And I wouldn't mind betting it's the kind of evening you'd like to spend at least once a week.

If dreams could come true...!
