

DID YOU HEAR?

Everybody likes to laugh now and then, and David is no exception. He really admires the great comedians and likes to hear new and original jokes, as well as the old classics. After all, did you hear . . .

. . . about the mother flea who cried because her children had gone to the dogs?

. . . about the cannibal who got fed up with people?

. . . about the octopus who always went into battle well armed?

. . . about the parrot who always carried an umbrella? He wanted to be polyunsaturated.

. . . about the Manx cat that went to the retail store?

. . . about the boy who got his kicks pulling donkeys' tails?

. . . about the little shoe that left home because his father was a loafer and his mother was a sneaker?

. . . about the Prime Minister who ordered all motorised vehicles in his country to be painted red? He wanted a red car nation.

. . . about the man who took milk and sugar to the pictures because he thought there was a new serial?

. . . about the biscuit that kept crying because his mother had been a wafer so long?
