

David's GIRLS

David Cassidy is one of the few boys around who could date just anyone he wanted. He's a very popular guy!—You'd go out with him, wouldn't you?

A lot of boys in his place would just go around dating anyone and everyone, not bothering about their feelings and enjoying the publicity. Press photographers are always on the lookout for stories of David's romances with various girls he happens to date.

David's different. He only dates a few girls, and if he did ever ask you out it would be because he really liked you, and he wanted to get to know you better. He couldn't take you out every night though, because he's a very busy man, as well as being a popular one.

You'd have to be content with seeing him for a couple of hours each week. He might phone you up unexpectedly to ask you to have coffee with him at his house, or, if you're lucky, and David has a free night—which is rare—he might take you to a super little restaurant where the food is good and there are no pressmen eager to see him.

That means you'd have to make sure that you always looked good for a date on the spur of the moment!

David always avoids the publicity men as much as possible in his private life. He doesn't like to be photographed with a girl, and if he thinks that a girl is going out with him to get her name in the papers, then David says goodbye.
