

A DATE WITH

It's what every girl dreams about... a date with David Cassidy. But suppose that dream were to come true for you... Suppose David were to invite you to visit him in the States. Where would he take you to show you a good time?

Well, as you know, David loves sports, so he might well ask you to go horseriding with him on the beautiful trails not far from his home in the San Fernando Valley. Of course, if you've never ridden before and you're not keen to try, he'd be quick to come up with another suggestion—like going to a baseball game! Baseball players, like cricketers, hit a ball with a bat... but that's where the similarity ends. A baseball game lasts nine 'innings' and can go on for anywhere from one to four hours. So that should keep you busy for a while!

Or David might plan a beach party for you. With a crowd of his friends, you'd go down to Malibu Beach... David would no doubt take his surfboard along, and while he rode the waves, you could stretch out on the golden sand and pick up a gorgeous suntan. When evening fell, you'd all cook hotdogs and hamburgers over an open fire and have a singalong session while David strummed the guitar...

Or David might plan something slightly more formal in the way of musical entertainment... like a visit to the fantastic Hollywood Bowl, an open-air concert hall where you could hear a symphony orchestra or even a jazz quartet. And if it was a rock concert you fancied, there's always one to be found somewhere in Los Angeles.

If you wanted to take in a movie, you could visit the world-famous Hollywood cinema—Grauman's Chinese Theatre.

Built in the style of a pagoda, the theatre offers as interesting a show outside as inside. For generations, stars have planted their footprints and handprints in the pavement of the theatre's courtyard. Whenever the latest box office sensation visited the theatre, an unusual ceremony took place: wet cement was poured onto one of the slabs of the courtyard and then, while the cameras of studio publicity men flashed madly away, the star pressed his hand or foot into the gooey cement for the sake of posterity. Today, reading the sidewalk is like reading a history of American cinema.

Of course, you and David could always go to a drive-in movie (provided it wasn't raining!). Or you might prefer to spend an evening at home... listening to David's vast record collection and sipping cool drinks by the pool...

But whatever you did, a date with David would certainly be a date to remember!
