

NEVER PLAY CARDS . . .

Beware, young man, the city slicker in the next seat who invites you to join him in a friendly game of cards. This simple country boy (centre of group) is about to be clipped of his savings by a couple of con men.

Having been lured into a game of Old Maid by the crook in the striped shirt, he plans to play his Ace. Foolishly he shows it first to the other sinister character who just happens to be looking at his cards.

No, no, whispers the slicker's accomplice out of the corner of his mouth. Play your Queen. He'll never beat that!
