DAVID CASSIDY

David Cassidy makes California his home now, but he was born and raised on the East Coast.

He's not terribly sports-minded—and takes part only for his own personal enjoyment.

He dislikes noisy parties and big gatherings.

He's not a loner, but he likes to be by himself sometimes.

One sure way to turn him off is to put on airs and try to act like somebody you're not.

David's a fairly independent sort of guy. He likes to make his own decisions—and he usually makes the right ones.

David spends hours listening to music, especially of his favorite group, The Beatles.

"The Thrill Is Gone," performed by blues singer B.B. King, is his favorite song.

Acting must run in David's family. His father is actor Jack Cassidy.

One thing David hates about cities is all the smog.

David's acting career began when he was 17.

David wants to stay in show business, but eventually he'd like to direct his own movies.

David is musically talented and plays both drums and guitar.

The actor he admires most is Marlon Brando.

David hates to dress up. He'd rather wear clothes that are old and comfortable. They have more personality that way.

David's an only child.

When David goes out to eat, it's a good bet that he'll order lobster.

David doesn't like people who are intolerant and don't care about others.

David loves to go mountain climbing.

David really goes for a girl who looks and acts natural.

His idea of a good date is going to a movie and maybe for a pizza afterwards.

Unlike most stars living in California, David still likes New York best.
