KIM DARBY and her new hubby split after seven weeks. Her date for the Oscars was Bruce Davison, her co-star in "The Strawberry Statement."

Save your bread for something else, don't waste it to see the film named "Sympathy For The Devil"—unless, of course, you happen to be a fan-atical MICK JAGGER worshiper and ROLLING STONE addict who gets her kicks drooling over the Prince of Evil and his entourage. For anyone else the picture is a triumph of stupefying dullness.

Jagger's next cinematic attraction, if you want to call it that, is "Performance," co-starring Anita Pallenberg, Keith Richard's girl friend, is a blood-and-gore bore, too. For a finale, actor-man James Fox shoots Mick Jagger right through his brains. What a way to go!

The third film, the one he made in Australia based on the colorful career of Ned Kelly, the most popular outlaw of Down Under, also has a lot of shooting and killing.

British films don't use the Motion Picture Code ratings system so anyone made by producers and directors so young they can't get into the theaters to see their own films!

Jenny Salt, that beautiful daughter of the writer of the "Midnight Cowboy" screenplay, was told to go home and get proof of her age before she could get in a local theater to see her boyfriend, Jon Voight in that picture.

Entertainment takes great pleasure in mocking, scoffing and scorning the Establishment's standards and traditions. Three new features: Faye Dunaway stars in "Puzzle of a Downfall Child," described by the studio as "a drama of a now-generation fashion model sinking into a psycho swamp."

DAVID SOUL, here with his wife, Karen, plans to make a movie for his friend's production company soon.

Edye Williams, the flaunting far-out sex goddess of 20th Century-Fox studio, won't do any nekkid stuff at all. Kim's first marriage to Jim Stacy, lasted about a year. Then came James Westmore- of any age can get into the theater and see all the sex and violence they can stand.

Hollywoodians are still rapping about the meaning of this year's Academy Awards. Of all the major non-music awards, only one went to a G-classified film or actor: John Wayne, True Grit.

Three went to X-rated "Midnight Cowboy" for Best Movie, Best Direction and Best Screenplay. All other top Oscars were copped off by movies designated GP, meaning under-17'ers admitted only with parental okay. Dig? Most of the best films are barred to younger teeners. As Bob Hope said, many of our movies today are being

MARK LESTER DID AN OUTSTANDING job in "Run Wild, Run Free," above, but he says he does his greatest role in "Eye Witness," his next release in which he plays a boy who witnesses the murder of a President!

"Diary of a Mad Housewife," features Richard Benjamin and Carrie Snodgrass in what a Universal poop-sheet reveals is a flick taking "a funny look at the wrecking of a young Establishment marriage." On the other hand, "I Love My Wife," with Elliott Gould and cast, ridicules and makes fun of modern unconventional marriage and morals.

Confusion: Three independent films currently lensing: "The Last Movie," "The Last Original B-Movie," and "The World Is Just a B-Movie."

Sweet Young Thing Kim Darby is acting out a nudie scene with Warren Beatty in Universal's "Big Sur," while land. That marriage lasted only seven weeks! A fishing license lasts longer than that.

Sue Lyon went through so many changes since her "Lolita" era that she no longer relates to her family and old friends. She's been a lonesome gal without close pals or a true love to call her own. Lately we've seen her out quite often with a sincere soulful poet par excellence, Rod McKuen, another lonely one. Say a little prayer their friendship turns on to love and marriage.

Marlon Brando hasn't done a new picture in the past year although he needs the money. Alimony and child support payments keep him dead broke. But he really doesn't want to work again and absolutely refuses all pictures that would be shot in far-away locations.

Waiting in the wings for his first movie acting break is the hairy-headed son of a bald-headed star. Roc Bryner, 23, son of Yul, is getting his acting training in a London little theater. Meanwhile Michael Douglas, son of Kirk, has wrapped up "Summertime," the film in which he makes his debut as a full-fledged movie star.
