was just something about the way he said the line that made it impossible for them to keep a straight face. It took several takes for them to finally get the scene right.

Brian has a very dry sense of humor, but it isn't often that he cracks up on the set. One time, though, he had to say the line "If apples cost a nickel, how many apples can I get for a quarter," and instead he said, "If nickels cost an apple . . ." After that, he—and everyone else—naturally burst out laughing every time he opened his mouth. Most of the time, though, Brian hardly ever misses a line, according to Susan. "In fact, he usually knows everyone else's lines," she
