The Girls In His Life

TALL GIRLS, short girls, medium girls, blondes, redheads, brunettes, girls with brown eyes, girls with blue eyes, girls with green eyes, girls with black eyes—there are lots of girls in David Cassidy's life.

But there are only a very few girls who play an extra-special part in it. Those are the girls who mean a lot to David—who give him friendship, love, support and encouragement when he most needs it.

The one who has first place in David's affections is, of course, his mother, actress Evelyn Ward. Even now that David's moved into his own home and is living on his own, he still takes—and is grateful for—her help and advice. And there's no question as to where David got his acting ability—with such talented parents as Evelyn and his father, actor Jack Cassidy. Although his parents were divorced when he was five years old, David's had the best of relationships with both of them and spends as much time with them as possible.

Another lovely lady entered David's life when his father married actress Shirley Jones. Not only is Shirley a good friend of David's, but he's now getting the chance to work with her professionally in "The Partridge Family," on TV and on records.

"It's really exciting to work with someone you already know personally," says David. "It's like seeing a whole new side of her."

Although David's an only child, he's recently acquired two "sisters" through "The Partridge Family"—Susan Dey, who plays Laurie, and Suzanne Crough, who's Tracy.

"When you work together all day on a series," David says,
