DAVID CASSIDY'S GIRLS

"it's almost like being part of a real family."

David has a good time playing with Suzanne, who's very lively and always up to something. "She doesn't stand still for a minute," he says. "Sometimes it's hard to keep up with her."

And Susan's become a good friend of David's. They spend a lot of their free time on the set talking together and have been seen socially at studio shindigs, although they say there's no romance. What David does say, though, is that she's terrific and "not at all the starlet type."

Unlike a lot of young stars in Hollywood, David usually isn't especially attracted to actresses. "People here are so concerned with themselves," he says. "They're always on-stage and playing a role. That doesn't appeal to me in a girl."

What does appeal to David is friendliness, a sense of humor, intelligence and thoughtfulness. He really goes for girls who think about others more than themselves and who have special things they're interested in. As for looks, clothes and age—they're really secondary.

There is one more special girl in David's life, but so far he hasn't even met her—and he doesn't expect to for awhile yet.

"Right now, I date different girls," David says. "I expect some day I'll want to find just one girl and settle down, but that's a long time in the future."

Does David have one ideal girl in mind? Are there certain qualities he's looking for in the girl he'll eventually want to share his life with? No, David says, but he's sure he'll know her when he meets her. And, in the meantime, he's having a good time with the girls who are in his life already. ●

broken a law. "I'm sorry, I didn't know," he said apologetically.

The policeman assured him that there wouldn't be a penalty as long as he took his kart off the street. And he kindly offered to assist Jack in removing it.

Jack breathed a sigh of relief when he realized he was out of trouble again. But now he had another big problem—where and when could he drive his go-kart and what could he do if he did want to drive to London?

The policeman had some suggestions for him. There are several tracks outside London where Jack can race his go-kart if he'd like to. And if Jack looks carefully, he'll find a few cars that are designed so that shorter people can drive them comfortably.

Once Jack removed his go-kart from the street and said good-bye to the policeman, he began to realize how funny he must have looked, stuck in his go-kart with the policeman pushing it. He just couldn't wait to tell his friends. In fact, the minute he got home, he called one and said, "Hello, it's Jack. I've just had a run-in with the police . . ."

Even though Jack jokes about his "trouble with the law," he's learned a lesson from it. He now realizes that knowing about the law is his responsibility. And he knows that obeying all the traffic regulations is very important for everyone's safety. As he said to the policeman, "It won't happen again." ●
