SURGEONS SAVE DAVID CASSIDY FROM DEATH

On a day late in June, at 2:00 A.M., a car speeds down the highway. Destination: Mount Sinai Hospital. David Cassidy rides in the vehicle, his body in anguish. All day long he has been suffering, but now the pain, no longer bearable required immediate attention. Sure, David had told himself, he'd been overworking; of course, he realized that the (Continued on page 40)
