

new back to Los Angeles to recuperate. On the afternoon of the second day he was back, he felt so much better he thought he'd go to his barber to have his hair trimmed!

• TOO STUNNED TO MOVE •

Just as David was relaxing in the barber's chair, he happened to glance out the window. He had been lucky to find a parking space right in front of the shop, especially at this time of day and on such a busy street. There was his pride and joy...his shiny white Corvette.

And there was a large car trying to maneuver into much too small a space. The inevitable happened! The front of David's car was crunched unbelievably. David was too stunned to move at first. When he finally dashed to the window, the frightened driver sped away without trying to find out whose car he had hit! No one got the license plate number, and David had to get his car fixed himself.

It was two days before he got his car back. The repair shop had done a great job on it, and you couldn't even tell it had been scratched! And since he had a bunch of errands that had piled up, he picked up his cleaning, put the tape recorder and camera equipment he promised to drop off at a friend's in his back seat, as well as his brother's guitar, which he promised he'd have fixed, and started off.

• DISASTER STRIKES AGAIN •

Somehow he never got everything accomplished he had planned! Since he had a recording session that day, he went there first thing without dropping off the stuff he had in the car.

The session lasted a little over four hours, and he didn't get out until after midnight! As he walked to his car, he noticed something different about it. The door on the driver's side was slightly ajar. Since David knew he had locked both doors before he went into the session, he was quite concerned and ran over to inspect!

Sure enough... someone had broken into his car and stolen all the items that were left in the back. He just couldn't believe it! Exactly a week ago his cycle of unbelievably bad luck began.

Then just as quickly as it began, it stopped. David isn't superstitious, but he is kind of curious about what he calls his "wacky week." He's asked all his friends if they've ever had anything like that happen to them! How about you?

If you have a similar strange tale you'd like to share with David, he'd love to read about it! In the meantime, we hope the only weird things that happen to David Cassidy are good weird things!
