gifts you send them. Although they have a tremendously busy schedule, they put a lot of stock in the old saying "Where there's a will, there's a way." So with that kind of determination, they're able to set aside time to devote just to you. In fact, they try to answer as many letters as they can personally, and make sure that everything is acknowledged and answered.

To set the record straight about those gifts, The Osmonds not only open them, they save them, too. They have boxes and closets in their Utah home just filled with the headbands and love-beads and other presents you've sent them.

"We're really lucky we have a home in Utah and another one in California," Jay says with a big smile. "Otherwise we'd be living in tight quarters—none of us throws anything out!"

And aren't you glad they don't?

RUMOR: The Osmond Brothers consider The Jackson 5 their rivals!

There's no truth at all to be found in any rumor concerning a secret feud between these two top groups. The fact is that The Osmonds and The Jacksons really dig each other's music! And they proved it when they met for the first time in Disneyland not too long ago. It was a happy scene—with everyone comparing notes, both professional and personal.

"All of us think The Jackson 5 are dynamite musicians and singers," Donny points out. "And being performers, too, we really appreciate all the hard work, dedication and devotion they put into their act. It's certainly crazy for anyone to think we resent them for being good. Wow! Nothing can be further from the truth!"

WE TELL YOU

Dear Cathy:

Bobby's 26 years old and David's 21. And in answer to your second question, they're both still very eligible bachelors.

AN OLD FRIEND

Whatever happened to Davy Jones? Is he happily married as they say he is? Will we be seeing any more of him and The Monkees?

Lisa Lopas, Appleton, Wisc.

Dear Lisa:

The members of The Monkees no longer work together as a group—but that doesn't mean you won't be seeing them individually. Currently Davy Jones is recording on his own. His first solo album is in the works. He's also hoping to do concert work, TV and movies in the future. And in his private life, Davy is still happily married to his bride of three years named Linda. In fact, the Joneses recently celebrated the birth of their second child, a girl named Sara Lee.
