ly look forward to reporting for work every day. You'll almost never hear them complain about the early hours or about having to sleep with an alarm clock next to their ear so they'll be on time for the day's shooting. But there was one special morning when your favorite TV family was bubbling with even more enthusiasm and excitement than usual.

"We were excited," Suzanne explains, "because that was the day shooting began for 'Getting Together.' And all of us were really looking forward to seeing Bobby and Wes Stern again, and meeting Susan Neher."

Since Bobby's set is right next to the Partridges' at Columbia Ranch, the Partridges knew they'd be "getting together" with their new friends every chance they got. And that's exactly what happened.

"We spent most of our free time just fooling around on our bicycles," Danny points out, "since everyone on the sets has one."

Needless to say, when the two casts were getting acquainted that first day, the lot seemed like the Indianapolis Speedway. A little touch of the Old West was also brought on to the scene when everyone sitting tall on their bicycles disappeared in a cloud of dust during lunch hour. (No wonder the studio heads are thinking of posting a speed limit for these traveling stars!)

DAVID RETURNS TO WORK

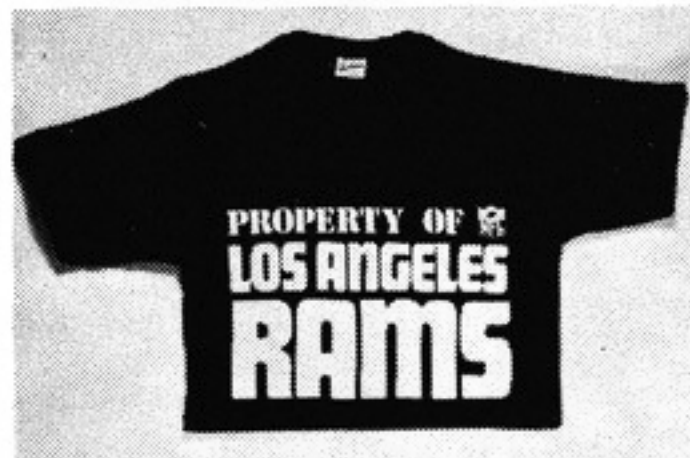

Ask any of the Partridges what was the happiest day they've shared together and they'll probably say it was the day David returned to work after recuperating from his operation this past summer.

"There's a lot of truth in the old saying 'seeing is believing,'" Susan admits. "No matter how many times we were told that David was just fine and would be back to work in a short while—we couldn't help but worry a little... until we saw his bright sunny, smile with our own eyes, that is!"

Since the Partridges have grown so close during the course of the show, they've come to regard David as a big brother. And although they had an unexpected vacation because no shooting could be done without David, they weren't completely happy to have those five weeks free because of what it meant to David. But the moment they saw him on the set again, well on the way to a complete recovery, they knew everything was going to be fine.

"There's no getting around it," Shirley says with a laugh. "The only thing that's better than listening to six Partridges singing is watching six Partridges smiling!"
