DAVID ASKS:
"WILL YOU STAY WITH ME?"

sic, his songs and the excitement of seeing him in person? Does he really matter to you?

David will change. He knows that. Maybe he won't stop liking beaches or walking, or dogs or girls with long hair, but he may become more serious... maybe he won't have quite as much time for you as he does now.

WILL YOU STAY?

Would you be furious or drop him, David wonders, if he were sometimes preoccupied with learning scripts, taking publicity shots or attending Hollywood premieres?

He'll still be a singer—he loves it and couldn't even think of not singing—but maybe he'll be doing other things, too. Inside, he'll stay the same... he'll learn and grow, of course, in his likes and dislikes, or in his performing talent.

But can you grow, too? Would you change with David or would he leave you behind? Should he stay a Partridge and please the fans he now has? Or will the fans he has love and respect him even more if he tries to fulfill himself as a singer, an actor and as a person?

As David pulled up and stopped his car in the driveway he suddenly knew what he had to do—wait. And have faith. Because it's your decision and only you can tell him: "Yes, David, I'll always be there!"
