

remember "The Fig Leaves Are Falling"???) because he was a young actor and super-sensitive.

Now, three bachelor apartments later, David is into organic food and rock music. He put together a group, called The Whole Damn Band, and toured Europe with them. From not caring about clothes and hanging on to a fave pair of jeans for years, David bought far-out gear from a fabulous Californian designer's (called Nudie) showroom and dresses like the superstar he is, instead of in early-grocery-clerk type clothing. When he drives he alternates between his silver-gray B.M.W. and the white Corvette his studio gave him. And at the same time he started to be outfitted by Nudie, David turned on to a fab British interior decorator and hired her to re-do his house in suede and leather specially-designed furnishings!

This is all part of the "new" David. The new David buys race horses, owns property in Hawaii, and spends his vacations in England on a private yacht. The new David is planning to fly away from the Partridges' nest after this season and really get into serious drama as well as heavy music. His new concert act will be so different, in fact, that David is not giving any more concerts until his career as a Partridge is at an end. Whether you're used to him or not, this is the new David. Are you right for him? If you're not sure, you'll definitely know after you take this test.

1 You're on your way home in David's B.M.W. after a perfectly smashing evening at a great party. It's a long drive to your house, but you don't mind because you've got your head on David's shoulder and there's no place you'd rather be. All of a sudden, the motor conks out! David lifts up the hood and peers at the motor but he can't do very much in the dark. He finds a phone and calls for a tow truck to come and take the car to a special place that deals with foreign motors. He gives you enough money to take a taxi home and searches for one for you. You want to wait with him; he refuses because he doesn't know how long he'll be and he doesn't want to leave the car. You should take the taxi, but vow never to see him again! A decent David would have taken you to the door!

2 After an hour of preparation you are ready for your date with David. You've got on a sweet, but conservative suit because David told you he'd take you to dinner. David arrives wearing a far-out suede pants and matching top, embroidered all the way down. He's also got on a pair of boots with high platforms. He looks fabulous but you both look ridiculous together because of what you're wearing. There's only one thing to do—cry your eyes out!

3 David is going away for a short weekend because he claims he needs a rest and a change of scenery. He's been invited to someone's home in fashionable Newport, Rhode Island. David invites you to come along. There'll be other people there, so you two won't be alone together. You think this is just making things too easy for David, so you turn down his invitation.

4 You and David go to the movies. While you're waiting in the lobby for the new show to start, you notice a tall slim redhead giving David the eye. You alternately watch him and then her. David does nothing more than smile at her, but you are suspicious. You'd like to go to the ladies' room before the movie begins, but you're too jealous to leave him alone. So you decide to sit in suffering silence and keep an eye on David and that hussy!

5 David tells you he would love to see you on Thursday but he doesn't know how long he's going to be at the studio. The best he can give you is a "maybe." You and your girlfriend, Andy, are listening to records while you wait for David's call. When he finally calls he tells you that he won't be able to make it over tonight because he's still at the studio. You tell him it's okay and that you'll see him another time. Andy says that you were too easy on him—that you should phone the studio and make sure he's really there. You tell her that you trust David and you'll do no such thing.

6 After an afternoon of swimming in David's backyard pool, you feel happy but fatigued. David tells you to go in the guest room, change your clothes and take an hour's nap. He's got some things to do before you two go out for dinner, so you can rest in the meantime. You feel a little nervous about the whole thing, so when you change in the bathroom you keep the door tightly locked. Then you lie down with one eye closed and one eye watching the door. What if David should come in? Other girls would know by being with David that he's a gentleman, but your mother has told you stories about wild Hollywood actors. You keep thinking about all the terrible things that could happen to you instead of resting.

7 You have a sister who's one year older than you. On the phone your voices are exactly alike. When David calls, your sister doesn't identify herself and David, thinking it's you, goes ahead with some pretty heavy, personal conversation. Your sister goes along with the deception and flirts with David. It's totally her fault but you get mad at David instead. He should have made sure it was you before he started rapping!

8. Even though you date David, you're not "steadies." Yet, you don't talk about your dates with other boys nor does he talk about his dates with other gals. One night you are with a guy and spy David walking arm-in-arm with a good-looking girl. You could get foolishly angry or simply say "Hi!" to David and be casual about the whole thing. You decide to play it cool and casual.

True _____
False _____

9 You go shopping with David and are really attracted to a dress in a boutique. You ask for David's opinion and he tells you matter-of-factly that he doesn't care for that dress. But you like it and you can wear it when you're not with David, so you decide to use your own judgment and buy it anyway.

10 David invites you to a recording session. You're excited and your girlfriends are, too. So excited, in fact, that they beg and plead until you offer to take them along. David doesn't know they're coming and you don't even know if it's okay. But if you had a friend who knew a rock star, you'd expect her to take you along to meet him, too.
