WILLIAMS TWINS: Andy and David Williams had ah-so good a time during their concert tour of Japan with their uncle, ANDY WILLIAMS. They got to meet lots of fans, who are lots more subdued than we are, but just as sincere. The twins were introduced to line after line of girls, many in native dress, who came to bow and bring flowers to their faves.

In case you're wondering when the twins plan to start dating, they told me at our very first meeting a year ago that they want to be able to drive their own cars first. Private transportation's a must on dates in this area due to everything being so far away and awful bus service. That gives them a little less than two years to go.

The boys were much missed at home by their mom, who'd never been separated from them before, and all their pets who kept going into the twins' empty room and searching frantically for them. Even Tim, their plant, missed them but refused to get emotional about it. (Yes, they really have a plant named Tim.) (Doesn't everyone?)

PARTRIDGE GOODIES: David Cassidy did a bit more traveling between his return from Hawaii and the start of next season's "Partridge Family" filming. He went "back East to visit a friend," which is all he had to say about that, and took several short trips to groovy places within a few hours driving distance of Hollywood. All in all, he spent a blissful couple of months, with no concerts, no recording and no TV shooting, his first such vacation since he became Keith Partridge.

Shirley Jones has just bought even more beach property in the beautiful burg of Santa Barbara, California, making a total of 140 acres right on the ocean and her the most popular weekend hostess in the entire world.

OUR OZZIES: By now you're probably spinning your own copy of The Osmonds' creation, "The Plan," 42-piece orchestra and all. But didjah know that the boys have slaved over this hot project for the last two years? And, at one time, it got a little too hot to handle! During the hotel fire that burned up their stage costumes and other belongings last year, songs composed thus far for "The Plan" went right up in smoke too. So they just kept right on truckin' and started over again.

The boys spent most of their spring and summer dividing their time between their favorite things, namely recording, giving concerts and working on their ranch in Utah.

TINY KUNG FU: Yes, RADAMES PERA really does have hair and yes they really did cut it all off for his TV portrayal of "Fu" as a child, and yes, it's grown back.

RADAMES is really a neat kid who goes to regular junior high school in Hollywood, rides his motorcycle everywhere he goes but to bed, and is mad about photography and camera collecting.

WHO'S DOING WHAT WHERE: Sonny and Cher did their first world tour this summer, and talk about cleverly arranged schedules! The day after they closed in London, they opened in Las Vegas, and with the eight hour time difference, they hardly had time to make the six thousand mile flight between appearances.

Kevin Tighe and Randy Mantooh are finally back from their world travels, and spent part of the summer working on a brand new show that'll be shown on Saturday mornings starting this fall. It's a cartoon thingy titled "Emergency Plus 4" and Randy and Kevin do their own voices. What's with the "4?" That's the number of kiddles who help the "Emergency" crew during emergencies, which makes sense.

The American group, Mama Lion, did a much-dug tour of Europe, and our friends across the great water especially liked lead singer and lyricist Lynn Carey. Lynn, the daughter of actor MacDonald Carey, has always been super artistic, specializing in poetry and pen and ink drawings.

Elvis Presley somehow managed to be in both Lake Tahoe and England at the
