

In the beginning, there were headliners and production shows in Las Vegas. Now the Rio has brought forth the stars, the lights, the (palm) trees and a unique idea and is calling it David Cassidy at the Copa. It's a whole new world where entertainment concepts are concerned, one designed to also bring forth all living things — namely large audiences.

It can be seen every night of the week except Monday.

As for Cassidy, the creative force behind the production, he loves the process of coming up with an idea and writing and producing, but says performing remains the soul of his existence. That's why he's also starring in the production, which he terms a hybrid, a one-of-a-kind combination of a Broadway musical production and a star's headlining concert.

"I want the audience to walk away with the belief they're seeing
