DAVID VIV

Star takes a personal tour inside mansion of ex-Partridge Family favorite.

SEVENTIES heartthrob David Cassidy took a gamble when he moved his family to Las Vegas in 1996, but the Partridge Family star has come up a big winner.

The Cassidy clan couldn't be happier in their $4M European-style mansion, which has seven bedrooms, eight baths and occupies more than 8,000 square feet.

The home has a warm, cozy feel accented by hardwood floors, hand-carved doors, beamed ceilings and ornate moldings. Cassidy and his wife, Sue, added another fireplace to the four existing ones, plenty of bay windows, lots of French doors and a second patio area. David installed an office and a game room above a four-car garage.

The 1.35-acre property, an oasis from the Nevada heat, is shaded by 150 pine trees and is lush with rich grass and flowers. Neighbors include Mike Tyson, Wayne Newton and the Sultan of Brunei.

"We love the setting and privacy," says David who, along with his songwriter wife of 11 years shares the magnificent home with their 9-year-old son Beau, 11, and a mini-dachshund, Chance.

Since the move, the one-time child star's career has been hotter than the Vegas sun.

The actor/singer, who produced the recent Vegas stage show The Rat Pack Is Back! as starred in EFX, is a champion breeder and racer of thoroughbred horses.

He also has a new album out, Now and Then, which has already gone platinum in England with staples like I Think I Love You, I Woke Up in Love This Morning, I Can Feel Your Heartbeat and Cherish.

And the handsome 52-year-old star is in the middle of a fan-packed cross-country tour that features most of the hits from his days on the hit sitcom with stepmom Shirlie Jones, Susan Dey, Danny Bonaduce, Bria Forster and Suzanne Crough.

"That's what I do best," he says of his concerts. "I love entertaining people!"
