Show," Miss Jones and Cassidy told host Wally Bruner that they would not be surprised if David leaves show business.

Commenting on that, David told the Bulletin that he is the type of person who has to keep moving. "I'm changing all the time," he says. "I like it now and I'll do it as long as there's something in it for me." He adds that the something is not necessarily money. "As long as I'm putting in and enjoying it, I'll stay." In the final analysis, David just isn't certain at this point: "Perhaps I'll move on; maybe I'll never cease."

Cassidy Senior, and Miss Jones also mentioned to their interviewer that a Cassidy family TV special, starring Jack, Shirley and David, might be in the works. Asked if he'd like to try something like this, David hesitated, then said he hadn't heard about it. "A TV special? I guess," he finally said. "I haven't thought about it."

That brought the interview to the subject of his relationship with his father. Most fan magazines and gossip columns claim that the two Cassidy men do not get along well. David disclaims this, saying, "My relations with him are not strained at all. I work a lot and he works a lot and I don't see him much. He's an individual and so am I, but I get along with him very well. I have feelings for him and I'm sure he's the same (about me)."

David admits that he hasn't seen his father for some months, but he says that he has talked to him on the telephone a couple of times, "and he's been really warm and nice." Concerning the reported friction between father and son, David says simply, "People have to have something to talk about."

In spite of all that's written about him in fan magazines, David doesn't have strong feelings against them. "I guess they're necessary — a lot of people want to read about the person on the cover," he explains. "The teen magazines don't do any harm. A lot of them are done to build interest in a person. I see no harm in them." He told the Bulletin though, that he doesn't read them.

David is scheduled to perform two concerts Sunday at the Indiana State Fair, but he has no idea when he will be arriving in Indianapolis. "They never tell me until the last moment," he explains. The reason for this is simple, if no one knows when David will be arriving, he will have an easier time when he arrives.

In spite of the problems his instant stardom has brought, David says he wouldn't take a different approach to his career if he were back at his guest-star days. "I'd probably make all the same mistakes and all the right decisions," he says. "I'm extremely fortunate with the records, concerts and television. I couldn't have asked for more."
