

Inside TV

Too much popularity haunts David Cassidy

By JOEY SASSO

TV CONFIDENTIAL:

DAVID CASSIDY is having a hard time. Why? Because he's too popular with his fans. Seems that even way out in the Hollywood Hills, David isn't safe. He used to have a plush downtown apartment until someone printed his address. He was stormed by the chicks. Dave took to the hills, and the followers found him again. He says they used to appear out of trees and bushes. Now he's out in the San Fernando Valley, in a town called Encino. He's hoping for peace and quiet there.