

This girl will be the envy of every weenybopper in Britain this morning . . .

IT'S TOO MUCH for any weeny-bopper to bear.

David Cassidy has found someone else.

The pop idol's other woman is, singer-songwriter Susan Shifrin.

They wined and dined together at a terraced house in Barnet, North London, this week even though David was too ill to have lunch at the House of Commons earlier that day.

And Florida-born Susan, aged 22—the same age as David—was a special guest at one of his Wembley concerts.

And a member of David's entourage said yesterday that she had seen him "on a couple of days."

They dined at the home of Don Murfet, in charge of security on the pop star's European tour.

"It was a small private dinner party because David wasn't too well," a spokesman said. "He didn't really want to go anywhere so we just wrapped him up warm."

Afterwards he and Susan were driven away in the back of a hired car.

But last night Susan retreated into a discreet silence: "I'll be crucified if this story gets around," she said.

Cassidy was still ill yesterday and a big party in his honour at the Savoy Hotel had to be cancelled. He flies back to Los Angeles from Heathrow today.
