

Lebanon Daily News,

Thursday, April 26, 1973

Here's how batty British groupies are: David Cassidy escaped the Dorchester Hotel in London hidden under a hotel blanket to bypass acres of teenage fans. The blanket was returned to the Dorchester and offered in a celebrity-charity auction. Group of girls from one of London's rich-private schools pooled their pounds plus their parents' and bought it — for $2,300! Sounds like early-Sinatra.