

★                      ★                      ★

PATTI MOSTYN, Sydney-based publicity director of Harry M. Miller Attractions, arrived in Auckland with the news that David Cassidy is a "real doll."

Thousands of teenyboppers would hasten to agree. But Patti, who has to deal with a wide variety of rock groups and many "difficult" artists, was referring not to Cassidy's sex appeal but to his co-operative attitude.

She flew to London to see his act and says: "I was expecting a real little horror, like so many of them, but David is really helpful. He'll go out of his way to assist and he isn't big-headed."

Only problem for the management: Cassidy is apt to break out in a rash if placed under too much nervous tension, so Patti will be avoiding pushing him too much with publicity stunts during his New Zealand and Australian tour.

★                      ★                      ★