

David Cassidy was quoted in 1975 as saying that he and his band had at one time systemized their groupie selections by putting all the pretty girls in a room where they could look them over, "point to the one I wanted, and let the band divvy up the rest"