

Show business briefs

David Cassidy displays some of his favorite places in his hometown, Las Vegas, on a special airing April 7 on the Travel Channel. And although he lives there now, he has dreams of doing other things. Mr. Cassidy has always been a showman, but he tells me that someday he'd like to train horses. "During the darker period of my life, when I wanted to find something to hold on to, I'd drive out to Santa Anita Race Track at 5 or 6 in the morning and watch the horses train. My love for the sport, the passion I have for it has been a constant. As a breeder-owner I think it's a positive experience for families to go out and enjoy themselves at the races for a day. There's a lot more to it than gambling for me. I buy the Racing Form every day and gamble probably three times a year. It's great to go out there. I used to go out there and not bet all day. I just like to go watch."
