Hi there!

We've been running about for the last two weeks, trying to answer the telephone calls and the post we've received, all of it asking one question: is David really quitting? There were so many of them, however, that we just couldn't give them the attention they deserved. But we are going to answer that question, right here, right now, because anyone who would want to know the truth about David knows that they can find it here.

And the answer is NO!!! In very big letters, and David would echo us in this. He's not quitting, as much as he loves horses and gardening, he also loves singing, acting and performing. We don't know how anyone who has read about David's early career could doubt his love for performing. The years he was pounding the streets of New York, working at lowly jobs in order to pay for acting classes and singing lessons, rehearsing and queuing up for auditions. Do you really believe he's going to quit after all the tough times he's been through? Never!

There are easier ways of making money, especially if you don't know that you'll be a star one day. But David was doing what he loved best, what he wanted to do . . . then and now. It's part of him, and he still wants to entertain.

We can't deny that David has enjoyed his holiday, and you've read in these pages that he wants to breed horses and that he loves growing tomatoes. But we do deny completely that David will be giving up his concerts and recording; it's quite simple: David is a performer, first and always. So cheer up, we'll have David around for a lot longer!

We must mention a very special telephone conversation we had recently. A young lady named Pamela Leach rang our office last week. Pamela is from Farnworth, Lancs, and after speaking with her, we reckon she might just qualify as David's most devoted fan. You see, while David was in Britain, Pamela went to every single concert, both at Belle Vue and Wembley.

And not only that, she was also farsighted enough to book a room at the Esso Motor Hotel — last November. She sent flowers and telegrams to David after each of his concerts, and her efforts were rewarded: she actually met David, and he kissed her!! And when David Bridger and Sam Hyman drove back to London, they were kind enough to give Pamela a lift — in David (Cassidy's) own car! Most of us would be satisfied with that, but not Pamela. She's leaving this month, for a new job. She's been lucky enough to get a situation as a mother's help — in Encino, California! And it's all because she wants to be closer to David. We'd like to hear from anyone and everyone who reckons that they can match Pamela's devotion to David.
