

"It'll be a lot fairer if he does gigs in Scotland and Ireland like he said on Radio Luxembourg—as long as he still does plenty in England as well!"

No-one we talked to spoke up for Wales. But I'm pretty sure I can add our Welsh friends to the list of 'musts'. And I'm equally certain that David would love to do a concert there if only the right venue can be found.

Lorraine Reynolds was rather more specific about the way David should arrange his visits. "I think he should come over to Britain at least three times a year to do live concerts now he's finished with The Partridge Family." She added:

BRITAIN

"Of course, it would be out of this world if he decided to come over and settle in Britain. But I don't really mind him living in America, as long as he spends, say, three months of the year with us."

Liz Weatherton, who lives in Wantage and was just up in London for a day's shopping, had another request: "Tell David I'd love him to make a film like he said he was going to one time."

Liz has got her head screwed on all right! 'Cos the idea behind her suggestion was that:

"Once it was out on release I'd go and see it day after day and just sit right through all the showings till I knew the whole thing off by heart. I'd be able to remember everything David said and the way he looked—and watch it all over and over again."

Liz hoped that, by the time she'd followed David's first movie all round the country, he'd be just about ready to make his next one!

Well, that sounds like a pretty good recipe for an all-year-round David diet. Liz! What do the rest of you think? "I don't mind what David does," Karen Muvesic told us, "So long as he keeps on releasing records and I can see him now and again on TV. I've never seen him live, so I can't help feeling that that must be the most wonderful thing in the world."

But, even supposing I did manage to see him or meet him one day, that could only last for a few hours at most. Whereas I can play my records for hours on end, and imagine that David is singing all those beautiful songs specially for me." Good point, Karen. But we reckon that, if you were ever lucky enough to meet David face to face, you'd have a memory that would last for ever. . . . Longer than your longest playing disc. It would be something for you to cherish even after all those records had got broken or worn right out. . .

Agreed?
But now for something completely different. . . . And we've got to give it to Lindsay Donovan of Notting

Hill. She certainly had a stroke of genius here. 'Cos she decided: "I'd like David to get right away from it all for a really long rest and a chance to relax."

FRIENDS

There's only one condition. . . . Lindsay would be right there along with him!

We talked to lots, lots more David-devotees and quite a few of them agreed with the ideas you've heard about. If only we had enough space to print them all! 'Cos everybody had something interesting to say. But I'm afraid that would have meant taking up the entire issue of the magazine! So we had to make a selection, and I hope you've found your pet idea among the ones we've chosen.

If you haven't, perhaps you'd agree with sixteen-year-old Pauline Shepper-ton. She just said, very simply: "All I want is for David to be happy and to do exactly what he wants to do."

And that, I guess, is what real love is all about. . . .

David as so many of us would like to see him. . . performing.
