Hello!

At last, the month we've been waiting for has come! No more waiting idly for the weeks to drag by, no more hoping against hope that David might pop over, just for a "special" surprise, as he did last autumn. No, this time it's for certain, and there can be no doubt that May is CASSIDY MONTH!

Everyone involved has made absolutely sure that David's concerts this month will be as perfect as possible. For a kick-off, the preparations for both gigs will be the best ever. Not in the sense that you'll be prevented from being anywhere near David—far from it. The security is being handled to ensure that everyone can see David in safety and comfort, as well as hearing him—for the sound system will be the most reliable available.

And, as usual, we've done our best to help you enjoy the concerts, both here and abroad. As you'll see inside, we've included lots of photos from David's performances in New Zealand and Australia, to give you an idea of just what to expect at his gigs here. And on page 7, we've done some investigation to find out just what the concerts will be like. Of course, there are ALWAYS a few surprises in any Cassidy concert, but we thought you would want to know a little bit about what to expect.

This is also a pretty important month for record releases. "If I Didn't Care" is really a very special release for David, for two reasons. You see, it's not only the first record he's produced, but it's also the first record on which David has ever played the piano. Oh, and before we forget, make sure you give the flip side a proper listening to: David wrote "Frozen Noses"!

You've probably noticed that this month's issue of the mag (the one you're reading, of course!) was on sale a bit before the middle of the month. There are two reasons for this. First of all, we wanted to insure that you received your copy well before the concerts, especially since Susie has the final details, as well as the names of two people who have tickets for sale.

But also, we are bringing the publishing date of The David Cassidy Magazine forward. By the summer, we hope to be bringing you the mag on the first of the month. So rather than miss out on an issue, we decided to work just a little bit harder, so that everyone would get the mag a bit earlier.

Hope that's all right.

Not much more to add here. Make sure that you get the mag next month for the announcement of which lucky reader has won David's own T-shirt.

See you in June.

Pat
