Hi there!

I guess I've recovered as much as I possibly can after last month's excitement. But I wonder if you have? I couldn't blame you if you haven't. After all, David's tour, the longest and most complete tour he has ever made in Britain, brought him in front of more people than have ever seen him before.

And all that after a gruelling world tour that would leave most people exhausted! If I feel a bit drained, can you imagine how David must feel? Still, he's right at the beginning of a nice long rest now, and I'm sure that Sam will see to it that David gets the time off that he needs.

And after that, what next? This special issue is dedicated to the Cassidy of the future. As you'll read on page 25, David has taken steps to make sure of that Bali Ha'i will be more than a song for him.

On page 5, you'll find out that David's talent is like an iceberg: enormous; and like an iceberg, you can only see the very top. We've uncovered a bit of it, and I hope that you'll enjoy this fascinating look at another side of David's talent.

Also, in David's Personal Letter, you'll have a chance to find out what David was thinking about when he visited our offices. Susie and I were really honoured, especially when he dictated the letter to Susie! Her usual perfect shorthand was up to the challenge.

Now, before I go, I'd like to thank all of you who wrote in congratulating us on our second anniversary. While a lot of magazines use their anniversary as an excuse to congratulate themselves, we didn't think that that was as important as bringing you the features and photos that have entertained you over the past two years.

So don't think that we've forgotten, or that we're not grateful. It's just that the best way we could celebrate was to see that we did the best job possible.

See you next month.

Now, before I forget, I want to apologise to all of you who entered the WIN DAVID'S T-SHIRT competition. I know that we announced that the winner's name would be announced in the May issue, but after seeing the incredibly large response we received, it just didn't seem fair to make a decision so quickly.

So we decided to hold off, not just until this issue, but until the July issue, to give everyone an equal chance.

However, to make it equally fair for the people who got their entries in the post immediately, it's only fair to announce that the competition is officially closed.

I hope that seems fair to everyone. It's really the only way we could be fair, both to those who got their copies immediately, and to those who, for one reason or another, weren't able to get hold of the issue until much later.
