

MIN PECH MILL

RUMOURS

DAVID RETIRING DAVID GETTING MA

OE3 it make you mad times. And I'm not trying to when you read some of the crazy things that are said about David and the words that are all too often nut into his mouth? Some of those articles have brought doubt, fear, havoc and heartache into the lives of thousands of face in this country. How can they know what to believe when they read these recors in papers and magazines Clearly, it's not always enough to be certain of something inside yourself, when you read things which seem to be saving something else ... So - somehovy all of David's devoted form want to know how to find out the truth I have read every one of the thousands of lette a which poured in to Super ar . . some furious with the writers of these articles, some unhappy, some signing themselves 'desperate' - soi 'c oven doubting David! But all plearling to know the TRUTH! As one fan put it. 'Either the paper exaggerated or David has lied to us before."

Well I ask you which r'o you think is most likely? I know who I'd choose to balieve before I even started to look into the facts of the matter

You must have heard ting thing at all to the press. saving 'Don't believe every suggest, by bringing this up. that reporters sit down and purposely invent a whole load of lies about someone out of spite Of course they don't! They're not stupid guys, by any means, and that kind of behaviour would lay them wide open to the libel laws. for a start.

But, on the other hand, it's their job to get a 'story', and, if the real facts turn out to be unsersational - well, they're going to be very tempted to add a bit of spice just to make good and sure that their story really gets noticed.

Hesitant

A favourite device is quoting something a star really did say, but presenting it to the public out of its original context, so that it implies a great deal more-and sometimes totally different - things. This is one of the things that really bugs big stars and makes them very hesitant to talk to reporters who they suspect might play this trick on them.

1 remember Ren Murnhy comp'airing about this very thing happening to him a year or so ago in the States, and he admitted that, for many months afterwards, he was real leary about saying any-

You see, if the quotation is, thing you read" a hundred as far as it goes a genuine one, the guy can't deny straight out that he ever said it. Because he did. It's just that, when those words passed through his lips, they didn't carry the same meaning and implication that they've been given in publica-

Real Facts

Sadly, it's the published version that his fans are going to know about and because they weren't there at the time when it all happened, they won't have any grounds for disbelieving the report. This is why David is so glad to have a magazine of his own in Britain which he knows his fans over here will be reading. You see, that means there's at least one place where they will get the truth and see the real facts exactly as he himself sees them!

Mind you. David hasn't come across many reporters who he would accuse of definitely misrepresenting him although some of them do tend to focus entirely on one side of his character or career and so present a rather lopsided view of David Cassidy to their readers!

He likes the sort of interview which is more like a chat where he feels free to introduce a subject of conversation as well as just sitting there like a human answering machine, churning