Hi!

I never thought I'd see the day when getting a letter from David could make me sad.

But it did this month. Read it for yourself and I'm sure you will feel just the same way as I did. Of course, it's wonderful to think that David can trust us enough to share his sorrow with us. . . . But, how can we be happy when we know that David is sad?

When I saw that familiar Los Angeles postmark, I counted on finding news inside that would keep me feeling good for a week! You see, David had already told me on the 'phone that he was getting a new puppy and I'd heard so much about Kula, I was eager to hear a whole lot more!

It seems as though David is fated as far as his pets are concerned. And for someone like David, who loves his pets so dearly, it is specially cruel.

Of course, I wrote to him right away. And I didn't write from myself alone, but from all of us. I knew it would be a couple of weeks at least before you would be reading his letter and I guessed you wouldn't want David to have to wait that long without knowing how much everybody in Britain cares. So I spoke for you. I hope that was what you would have wanted.

Right now, David is throwing all his energy into his work - spending long hours in the recording studio and undertaking gruelling concert schedules at the weekends - in an attempt to drive thoughts of Kula and the revived memories of Sam, to the back of his mind. He reckons that, by driving himself to a peak of tiredness, he should be able to get to sleep when he gets to bed at night.

What he would really like to do is fit in a brief trip to Hawaii soon. The change of scene and atmosphere would be good and would break the ties of his memories. David thinks he might come back from there feeling more relaxed and like his old self again! But then, the problem is finding even a few days to make the trip. It means so much planning and re-adjustment that David will probably wait until the next break in filming comes up, anyway.

But now, to shift on to a brighter note. . . . The sales of 'Cherish' have been really incredible over here - there is no other way to describe them.

Now, as you are one of the people who have helped to put David's album at the top of the charts, we reckoned it would be nice if you could join in and sing along with David as you were listening to your current fave disc. If you've played those tracks anywhere near the number of times that I have, of course, you'll no doubt have picked up many of the lyrics for yourself by now. Still, it's nice to have them written down anyway, so you can fill in any odd words or phrases that you might have missed. Don't you agree?

So, together with a detailed review of the album, we have printed the lyrics of one of the songs this month.

See you next month in David's own mag.
