

SUPERSTAR'S OFFICIAL

David Cassidy

MAGAZINE

58 Parker Street
London WC2B 5QB
Editor: PAT WALLACE
Art Editor: MIKE RAXWORTHY

© Copyright 1974 & trademark
Columbia Picture Industries Inc.

Hello!

And a Merry Christmas to you all! It seems only fair to begin this month's issue with a wish for your happiness. This whole year has been such a crazy mixture of happiness and sadness that it only seems appropriate to start this month's editorial with a cheerful greeting to you.

This year has been good in so many ways. We've seen David's most complete tour ever of Britain, two beautiful albums and an exclusive single in "If I Didn't Care".

It was also a slightly sad year in some ways. Of course, so many of David's fans were disappointed with the incorrect and premature announcement that, and I quote, "David is Quitting". As we showed in later issues, in fact David is certainly not quitting. But a lot of people were really hurt and upset.

The saddest event of all, of course, was the tragic death of Bernadette Whelan. People everywhere were upset, shocked and terribly depressed. And not least of all David Cassidy. I doubt that anyone will ever realise how upset David was after the tragedy. Those of us who saw him in the days that followed White City watched helplessly as he grew increasingly sad.

It's something that would upset anyone, and David won't soon forget it.

Still, we must all look to the future, and David is no exception. Every year has its good and bad points, and at least this year has ended off with David healthier and happier than he was in a long time.

David will be entering the New Year with loads of possibilities, both musical and dramatic, at his fingertips, and 1975 should give us a chance to really judge the true David Cassidy.

The old David was great, and of course the reward that David received recently in Melbourne is a testimony to that. But I can only think that the new David is going to have so much more to offer us all that, even though we won't forget David's days as a Partridge, we'll all soon be wondering what took him so long to make the break! In short, I just have to say that the new David is going to be dynamite!

So, I guess you could say that this past year has been the best of all for David's fans. Because we've seen both sides of him, the old and the new, and that's something that no other year can boast, either past or present.

Let me just wish you a very Happy Christmas from all of us here, and a wish that you will have an even better year in 1975.

See you next year!

Pat