Hello!

Before I do anything else, let me wish you a very Happy New Year from all of us at the David Cassidy Magazine. This year is going to be full of excitement for all of us, and especially for David Cassidy. As you'll be able to read in these pages, David will soon be giving us a sample of his new self. By the time you read this, he'll certainly have been in the recording studios, and he may even have announced which record company he'll be signing with.

In this issue, we also have some fascinating letters from girls who have actually met David. As I announced in our November issue, we will be awarding three £10 prizes to the writers of the best three letters. The lucky winners are Alice Scott, of Northwood, Middx., Sandra Segui, of Stevenage, Herts., and Sarah Watson, of Aldershot, Hants.

In addition to these three letters, we've also published letters by two other girls, Frances Bignell, of London, and Sharon Gamble, of Ruddington, Notts. Both of these letters were especially good, and we thought that you would like to see them—partly because they are interesting, but also because they show just what a nice guy David is when he meets his fans.

The New Year's Resolution is just as much a custom in the United States as it is in this country, and you'll be able exactly what David's ideas for self-improvement are in this month's personal letter. I know there are some people around who think that David is just about perfect now (myself included!), but he's got other ideas. And as usual, they're certainly worth reading.

This month's episode of The David Cassidy Story is again concerned with one of the most painful aspects of David's life—rumours. They are, of course, a part of his life, just as they're a part of everyone's life. But for someone like David, there are a couple of slight differences. For one thing, there are more rumours going around, because David is more newsworthy than most people.

As you'll notice, we have a mixture of pix taken before and after David's haircut. I think he looks quite alright with short hair, but I know some of you have written in to suggest that you prefer him with long hair. So we'll be bringing some of each to you for awhile yet, so that everyone gets a chance to see David in the way they like best.
