MAGAZINE

Hello!

I want to start off straight away by saying that I didn't want to increase the price of your David Cassidy magazine. But—as you know very well—the cost of everything keeps rising these days and that includes the cost of paper and printing, so I really had no choice.

You keep asking the same question in your letters “When is David going to do something?” I know just how frustrated many of you feel because I share your desire to know more about David's future plans.

The subject is really far more complex than it seems at first. It's not just a case of David popping into the recording studio next Monday and recording a couple of songs for a new single. And in this issue we've also got a special feature from our Hollywood reporter giving us at least some of the problems that David faces.

He's got to take so many important decisions during the next few months. But I do know that I wouldn't be doing my job properly if I didn't pass on your message to David. So here goes.

“Your British fans all feel that they've been very loyal to you over the past three-and-a-half years. So please could you let them know as soon as possible what your plans for 1975 are? OK David. Now it's over to you!”

Many of you have also written to me about various stories about David that have been published in other magazines and papers. My advice is to ignore them. Unfortunately, some papers like to publish a certain type of article about superstars—anyone will do. I suppose David had to take his turn sooner or later.

I have had quite a number of letters from male readers recently, usually asking if they are the only guys who read the magazine. The answer is obvious, David has readers of both sexes reading his magazine, lots of guys, as well as girls. So, I hope all of you guys will forgive me if I do seem to aim a lot of my remarks and questions at girls. I certainly don't want to leave you out.

Due to the fact that the postage will be going up very shortly, we won't be accepting any more subscriptions to the David Cassidy Magazine until we find out exactly what the new charges are going to be. It would be unfair to have to go back to people once they have taken out a subscription and ask them for more money. As soon as we have the new charge I will let you know on this page.

See you in the April Issue.
