song, bringing tears to your eyes, or thrashing out some hard rock number, making you stomp your feet and scream, you can't deny the magical spell of David Cassidy. "He has the power to attract and hold, the power to excite you and make you run through a whole range of emotions just by watching him or by listening to his voice on the radio or on his records. He can make you laugh or scream until your throat hurts . . .

"David loves animals and the countryside. He loves the outdoor life: to hike in the mountains and to camp; to sit in the sun on the soft golden sand on the beaches of Hawaii. Or just to sit quietly in a field full of pink clover and wild flowers, to touch a tree."

By now, you must be starting to realise what we meant when we talked about the high standard of entries. Because of lack of space, we've only been able to print extracts from these letters—each one of which deserved to be printed in full. And then there are all the entries which we haven't even been able to mention but which would have made fascinating reading.

But we just had to accept the fact that, if we'd printed everything we wanted to, there simply wouldn't have been room for anything else in this issue—not even the photos. So you can understand why we had to call a halt when we did!

We did, however, feel that we had to make an exception in the cases of the winning entries in each section of our David Dossier. So this month we are printing one of the two letters which tied for first place on David As A Person, while next month you can read in full the prize-winning entries in all the other sections.

As I said before, it was a terribly difficult decision to make. But, if you turn to page 24, you can read the first of the letters which we felt came closest to capturing 'David As A Person'. They are very different, but each shows real thought and a genuine love for David expressed with sincerity and originality. So special congratulations to Jill and Caroline, who each win £5. And our thanks to all of you who gave us so many happy hours of reading—along with the headaches!
