are all white, and when you look up you can see all of the roof beams. In front of the fireplace is a low heavy wood table. Through a gap is the dining room which has a huge oak table with eight oak chairs around it. It was too heavy for Chad to take with him, so he left it for David.

"The spare bedroom—which is often used by his mother—has a ceiling of criss-crossed beams, and arches into a point. The flagstone-floored kitchen has every modern aid in it for Jane, David's housekeeper. Out of the kitchen, along a corridor is the music room. It has a Union Jack painted on the wall. This is one of the only things that David allowed to remain when he moved in. The rest of the small room is dominated by a piano. Lots of wires link through to the small sound studio . . .

DOUBLE BED

"In David's own bedroom there is a big double bed covered with a patchwork quilt and with a small table beside it. Over the bedhead is a book shelf and at the bottom of the bed a small T.V. On the right hand wall is a framed picture of Bullseye, David's Irish setter. The room itself is not very big, but David has his own private bathroom which is luxuriously tiled, with a shower and a slightly sunken bath at one end, and a wash basin at the other.

"Outside is a huge Canadian maple tree which shelters the whole roof and has, intertwined in its branches, plenty of mistletoe!

"Across the yard is a guest house where Sam Hyman lives. There is also a swimming pool, with an outdoor bar and a changing room next to it. Hidden away behind the guest house is David's small vegetable plot where he grows tomatoes and corn on the cob among other things."

And Sue ends her letter wistfully:

"I suppose I'll just have to go on wishing I could enter David's home with him one day."

Thanks, Sue . . . You've really shown us around! And, for anyone who had not already read a detailed account of David's home, that must have made very interesting reading.

In any case, let's hope that however much you knew before, Sue's account may have added perhaps one or two details to your list.

AMAZING

I'm afraid that page space seems to be shrinking yet again! You know, it's amazing how small these pages turn out to be when you've got such a lot to pack in as we have on David!

But to save another month's agonising suspense, we're going to announce the names of our other prize-winners right now.

Carol Dallison from Hemel Hempstead in Hertfordshire won the section on 'David's Friends'.

In the end, we decided that out of so many experts on 'David's Personal Tastes' who wrote to us, we'd award the £5 prize to M. Meehan of Tupsley, Hereford, who didn't let us into the secret of what the 'M' stands for, although she let us into plenty of other secrets—all about David!

Finally, our outstanding expert on 'The Places David's Visited' turned out to be Cathy Brown of Barnet, Herts. (It must be something about the Hertfordshire air that produces so many ardent and well-informed Cassidy fans!) Cathy sent a really long, exhaustive account of the places David's visited—starting with the Flower Fifth Hospital New York, where he was born! We thought that was a delightfully original touch, Cathy. So, if you want to brush up on these aspects of David's life, make sure of your copy of the mag next month, when we may also have room for a few more excerpts from the runners-up.

Meanwhile, congratulations to you all. To the winners especially, of course, but also to the hundreds of other loving fans who have given us so many hours of pleasure by setting down what YOU feel about David. We just hope you've enjoyed it as much as we have!
