Hi there,

I know that you get rather annoyed when I don't reveal exactly where David is staying in London or the address of the recording studio that he's going to be at the following week, but the problem is that if we did publish the full details then all sorts of other problems would rear their ugly heads.

For example, if we revealed that David was going to be staying at 39 North Mews the next time he was here, then pretty soon the residents of North Mews would be demanding that David went and stayed some other place because they didn't want people standing outside their homes shouting for David Cassidy.

Again, recording studio managers are responsible for thousands, if not hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of very valuable equipment and, naturally, they are terrified that if anyone broadcasts the fact that David Cassidy will be recording in their studio during the second week of October they'd be inundated with fans sitting on their expensive mixing desks and recording instruments.

I know that you wouldn't do anything of the sort, of course. In fact, I don't think any follower of David Cassidy has ever been responsible for causing damage to any recording studio or building, to the best of my knowledge. But you know what people are like and in order that David should be able to come here we have got to be silent about what he's going to do before he comes.

I think many of you have been quite surprised to see the photos of David playing tennis in a recent issue. Some people think that David never goes out but just sits at home listening to new songs. Of course, he has to do a certain amount of that in order to select numbers for his future recording sessions. But he's also very fond of all sorts of games and in this issue we have got a picture of him playing yet another one - table tennis. And Pat's inserted a special feature on what he does when he disappears off to his holiday home in Hawaii. It certainly sounds a marvellous place.

We've still got some of the 1974/75 wallets left so if you haven't got the one with the black and white cover then all you have to do is to send a postal order or cheque for 85p to me at the address above. Make sure you cross it with two lines from the top to the bottom and make it payable to the David Cassidy Fan Club and I will get a wallet off to you by return.

We have still got some photos left, but we have replaced Item 'D' with a completely new one. The Price is still the same, i.e. 30p for one, 2 for 56p, 3 for 72p and the set of four for 80p. Here again, first send a cheque or postal order to the David Cassidy Fan Club at the above address.
