Hello there!

Wasn't it marvellous how David took the British record charts by storm last month! Of course, we've all been waiting for the day when that would happen for a very long time now . . . but I think there were one or two other folk who got a bit of a surprise!

It's nice to know that pretty well everyone in Great Britain realises who David Cassidy is at last . . . though you still occasionally hear strange stories of people who haven't even heard of him yet . . . Still, I suppose, if they are over seventy-five, they might have some excuse!

You, on the other hand, do not (repeat: NOT) have any excuse for forgetting to send an s.a.e. (short for STAMPED ADDRESSED ENVELOPE) when you write in. There was a time — way back in the dim and distant past — when your s.a.e.'s came in thick and fast. But recently they've been so few and far between that I began to wonder if the G.P.O. had brought in a stamp rationing scheme or something!

Please do remember them in future. It will make all the difference as to whether you receive an answer or not, and it also helps a great deal to speed up the whole process of running the Fan Club.

Also when you're writing out your name and address to send off with a postal order, don't make it, or the paper it's on, too small. Sometimes I get very tiny pieces of paper with such cramped and small writing that I virtually need a magnifying glass to read them. But, the big problem is that these tiny, tiddly bits of paper can so easily get separated from the postal orders they belong to and perhaps get totally lost. So, please, use a normal sized piece of paper next time you're sending in for something. The place for postage stamps is on the outside of envelopes (repeat plug for s.a.e.'s. — hint, hint).

Just one other thing: have pity on the office franking machine! I can only put so many letters and Fan Club wallets through it a day; and, as it is, it's keeping red hot in attempts to cope with the masses of envelopes that pass its way.

Please don't expect to get your wallets by return of post! So many people write in to ask why their wallets haven't arrived only a week or two after they sent off their applications. It's quite likely that I'm only just slitting open the envelope by that time, because there is a permanent back-log of mail here . . . so much so, at times, that we wonder if the office floor will stand up to the extra weight! (Well it's bad enough when both Pat and I are in the office anyway . . . you can hear the floorboards creaking!

Could the gentleman in dungarees who came into our office on 11th October with his daughter's application form for the David Cassidy fan club please get in touch with us urgently?

Other people we're trying to track down include Jeanette Logan (PO no. 735229), Marie Parle, and a nameless, addressless person from Tipton, Staffs., who sent in PO no. 755063.
