

DAVID'S FANTASTIC STAGE ACT

Just imagine . . . over four thousand seconds of — DAVID CASSIDY, there in front of you on stage, singing for you and reaching out his arms towards — YOU !!!

That's what you've got to live for if you're one of the lucky people who have got tickets for a Cassidy Concert in Britain. Two, at least, of the half dozen or so shows scheduled will be at the Empire Pool, Wembley, (March 17th and 18th) and for those two nights Wembley will be the centre of the world, just as Manchester will be on the 13th and 14th.

WAY TO WEMBLEY

In fact, Wembley may have seen some crowds in its time, but never has it seen a crowd quite like the population explosion that will happen there on those nights. In addition to the 8,000 ticket holders for each performance, there will be thousands upon thousands of fans who weren't so lucky, but who will be going to Wembley just so they can be close to David on that day.

If they can catch a single glimpse of him — or, better still, touch him as he brushes past — then every mile they've come, every penny they've spent, will have been worth it. It's something just to know that you're even in the same town as David To be in the same stadium and know that, any minute, you will see David in action!

But, that's the thrill that thousands of you will have in store — and the thought of it should buoy you up right through the cold, dismal winter days that seem to be here to stay for a while.

Every time there's a danger of your chilblained toes, or your shiny, red nose getting you down, just think yourself ahead to the day when YOU might be getting off the bus or tube at Wembley . . . with a ticket for David's concert in your hand!

As you walk into the entrance of the Empire Pool, it won't seem possible to you that you can get any more excited than you are at that moment . . . The realisation that you are actually there and that no world-shattering disaster has happened to prevent you seeing David in the flesh will be enough to set your heart pounding louder than any drummer!

LONG WAIT

Of course, you know that it won't be David who will step out on stage first, because he is top of the bill. But, although you know that perfectly well, you still gasp in a breath of anticipation and feel that funny sensation in the pit of your stomach which means that David can't be too far away!

And you're right! Because, by this time, he will be sitting in his dressing room, following the early acts through with half his mind, while he devotes the other half to going over his own routine . . . He'll be checking that his guitar's in tune, or maybe humming through a number he's a little bit worried about. And, all the while, he too will be feeling that extra edge of nervousness because this will be one of his first ever live gigs for his British fans and it is so terribly important to him that everything goes absolutely right.
