Hello there!

The office is just one big buzz of excitement right now, and I guess that's the way it's going to stay for the next few weeks, until we can actually get it all off our chests by giving David the most fantastic welcome back to Britain!

At the time of going to press, the latest info on his arrival in England is Monday 12th March at Manchester. But do check for more details in the March issue of SUPERSTAR. We'll let you know there if anything has changed, and it should be possible by then to give you a flight number and a more precise arrival time.

One thing is absolutely certain . . . Whatever day, whatever time, David does actually land, he'll find a reception there to greet him that will beat all others! Right? Here's the chance that all of you fans up there in the North have been waiting for . . . He's actually making his entrance at your end of the country this time!

Once he's here, though, he's still got to have somewhere to stay! And the last thing I heard, that was still very much up in the air. (No, I don't mean he'll be sleeping on top of Nelson's Column!)

David had been very much in favour of repeating the yacht experiment that worked so well at the end of last summer.

Then he suddenly remembered how bitterly cold and wet it had been the last time he'd ventured a Spring-time visit to Britain! That was when he suddenly lost all enthusiasm for the yacht idea!

On the face of it there aren't that many alternatives. There are the big hotels, like the Churchill, of course. But it seems unlikely that they are going to welcome David and friends with open arms — especially after the double-trouble they had not so long ago when the Osmonds and the Jacksons booked in at the same time!

The other option would be to rent somewhere privately. Like a big house out in the country somewhere — big enough for David and the group coming over with him. That way, they'd all be able to be together and keep each other company. And they might have a remote chance of getting in some rehearsals before the place is discovered and surrounded!

This certainly seems to be the most sensible solution to the problem, and it's the one I'm backing. (As I've never won a bet in my life, that last fact is of dubious value!)
