

It was the storybook kind of romance every girl secretly dreams about, and which in Kristie's case came true with such stunning reality. And after the beautiful wedding celebration Kristie and Bob slipped away to the Bel Air hotel to spend their wedding night, the night they had made themselves wait for, for well over a year . . . and then flew off to a dream honeymoon in Hawaii. "We'll have our own little grass shack at the Cocoa Palms," said Bob grinning, "and then go on to Maunakua Beach for a while."

And then? Then back to their own apartment in Studio City and the beginning of life together and all of their dreams. Kristie and Bob had the strength of character to make certain promises and commitments to each other and to themselves—and they lived up to every one of them.

Did they do the right thing by waiting? One look at their happy faces . . . and you have the answer to that question!

DAVID CASSIDY

David has some other ideas on the subject of matrimony: "As a legal thing, marriage is so ridiculous. It's not ridiculous if you really want to do it. If that's the way you feel about it, if you want to get married, great. If I honestly felt that way, I would do it. But I don't feel that now. I'm not ready. It's like I'm going to school—only instead of college, my school is show business."

And his campus is Hollywood. David has some strong feelings on that subject, too: "I don't see any difference in the morals of Hollywood and the rest of the scene. Everybody everywhere is involved with the sex scene. People rap about it, and I think it is a subject that should be talked about because it's something that affects everyone's life, and it is in everybody whether you accept it or not. I can talk about it. I may not do it, but I can accept it and talk about it. I don't think sex is dirty and that is the most important part to me."

"A lot of my friends live together. I don't walk over to their houses and scold them 'Naughty, naughty.' What does that mean? It really means nothing unless they feel that way, feel guilty, or have parents perhaps who feel it is wrong. On the other hand I don't feel that marriage is out of date—if someone feels they want to, I think it is great. I think a lot of people feel it necessary to have that piece of paper in order to live together, to have some judge say 'Okay.' I think it is fine either way, so long as the emotion is there, so long as there is honesty."

With David, that is the key word. Honesty. He is perhaps the best balanced kid who ever made the show business scene. He grew up in West Orange, New Jersey, "where people are still living in sort of another world." West Orange was where he and his mom and dad—Evelyn Ward and Jack Cassidy—lived with his mom's parents when he was little. Evelyn and Jack were both struggling for a place in show business. They'd married very young, and the going was tough. So they made their home with David's grandfather Ward. After his parents were divorced, David and his mom lived there.

It was a peaceful, serene, black-and-white sort of existence, "a whole different scene," a scene he loved and to which he constantly returns. "I go back all the time. I see them at least a couple of times a year, I have grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins there."

"The whole family is rather religious,
