

One Year with the Partridge Family

You'll probably agree that "The Partridge Family" made last year's television season a very exciting one! Of course, you're probably looking forward to another great year with them, too! But first, come along and recapture all the fun, happiness and love the Partridges brought to you as Tiger Beat's Official Partridge Family Magazine takes you back through one year with the Partridges!

THE TITLE OF the show was "When Mother Gets Married." Shirley Partridge's kids were afraid that she was being swept off her feet by a playboy and they were determined to stop him! John McMartin guest starred. The song for the this segment was titled "I really Want to Know you." It ran on October 23, 1970!

THE DATE WAS September 25, 1970, the show debuting on ABC was "The Partridge Family." Flashbacks showed how an average midwestern family broke into show business. But it was more than just another television show — it gave us David Cassidy, Shirley Jones, Danny Bonaduce and all the other we've come to love.

IN THIS SHOW Henry Morgan guested as Willie Larkin, an opportunistic motorist who turns a minor accident into a half-million dollar lawsuit. Of course everything worked out in favor of the Partridges in the end! The song this time was "I'll Leave Myself a Little Time."

THE THIRD EPISODE of the Partridges featured Ray Bolger as the grandfather who decided to join the group! He almost did, but in the end decided against it!

"SEE HERE, Private Partridge" was the show and Danny was inducted into the Armed Forces. The song that went along was "On the Road."
