

STORIES OF ALL THE TOP STARS

MICHAEL COLE

Mike has the reputation of being a rebel, but his attitude toward girls is best described as old-fashioned. He doesn't dig being chased by any female—no matter what she looks like. Although many guys would love being in his place, he just doesn't like being around an aggressive girl. In Hollywood, it's not unusual for a guy to be asked out by a girl, but Mike draws the line at being put in some girl's "little black book."

BILL COSBY

It's not easy working with Bill, and he openly admits it. In the beginning of his acting career, he only felt comfortable performing before a live audience and would freeze every time he had to appear before a camera. Although he doesn't have this problem anymore, he presents a new one for the actors he's working with. He never follows the script exactly, but prefers to ad lib naturally. Anyone he's acting with had better be listening well!

TONY CURTIS

Twenty years ago, when Tony arrived in Hollywood, he had only five dollars to his name. Now his credits include over fifty films and a starring role in the TV series "The Friendly Persuaders." Although he has a full schedule, he still likes to get away and take plenty of vacations. He says he doesn't want to make his career his life because he made that mistake one time before. Now after a day's work, he relaxes instead of worrying.

SUSAN DEY

When Susan made her debut as Laurie in "The Partridge Family," instead of going on an ego trip, she found that her self-confidence actually needed a boost! Since her acting experience was limited to high school drama, she naturally felt nervous about performing on TV. So after doing the pilot, she decided to try to get rid of those self-doubts by taking acting lessons from January until May in New York. Her idea seems to have worked.

PETE DUEL

One of the great loves in Pete's life is animals, and he's proved it in many ways. There was the time he jumped into the freezing waters of the Hudson River to save a strange puppy. And while he was filming "The Psychiatrist," he took home a bird that had a broken leg and gave it the best of care. At home, he's surrounded by three faithful pet dogs and any other stray animals that find their way to his door.

SANDY DUNCAN

Sandy's secret fuel for sky-rocketing to success was determination and lots of talent. At the age of six, she made up her mind to become an actress and a few years later began appearing in TV commercials. She's also a familiar face to theater-goers since she's been in numerous Broadway plays. Now she has her own TV show, "Funny Face." Born in Henderson, Texas, she and her husband Bruce Scott are currently living in Hollywood.
