after I settled myself down, I still didn't find too many I'd consider the marrying kind. I think, in general, girls today are too aggressive. They're constantly advertising themselves. Especially in Hollywood. Girls don't know what it is to be gentle, feminine or modest."

Mike's definitely one of the more eligible bachelors at the moment. And although he really wants to settle down to married life, he's not willing to settle down with some girl who just thinks of him as a handsome face and a lot of dollar signs. Though David admits that seeing his father perform when he was just three years old was the thing that drove him to his career, he also says flatly that his family never pressured him into it. They wanted him to do what he wanted—not what they wanted him to do. In fact, his mother was against David's performing at all when he was a child. As most mothers do, she wanted David to complete his education and then decide what he wanted.

So after he finished high school, David decided he wanted to become an actor. He went to New York for his training and eventually landed a role in a Broadway musical, "The Fig Leaves Are Falling."

"Though the show was a real bomb," says David, "it was a good experience. First of all, I got the part completely on my own. When I auditioned, I used the
