

HAS LOVE PASSED HIM BY?

formed itself again in his memory.

The day she said good-bye! He had too little time for her anymore since the series began, she had said. She didn't like his being with other girls even though it was only acting. All the things that were necessary in his career, she found she couldn't accept. So, too quickly, it was ended. For a time, he was happy and content with the company of a very special person. But that special person was gone now!

The sharp rap at the door brought David back to reality. "Hey, David! Five minutes, okay?" the assistant director's voice came through and David called back, "Okay, be right there!"

He picked up the script and walked to the door. The sight of the many people busily at work on the set caused David to smile. He had felt badly and deeply hurt when that girl had told him good-bye. He had thought they were in love! But now he knew she was not meant for him. If she had loved him, she would have been more understanding about his career and its demands upon his time and energies. Standing there looking at the set where in a few minutes he would be working, David knew he may be alone for short periods now but he also knew he would never be alone for the rest of his life!

For now he had his work and his friends to fill his time. But, someday, he would meet a person and not be mistaken in knowing their love would last. As he stepped down and walked towards the set, David started to whistle. He had felt that his only chance at love had passed him by that time, but now he knew he had been wrong. Somewhere, that girl had found another person she had been happier with and had learned to love. And, David was happy for her. In time, with a little patience, he would find his "other" person, and only then he would be able to say love hadn't passed him by, it had merely caught him!
