

The problem's the same whether it's David Cassidy or the boy next door.

How do you know—how do you know for sure—what he's trying to say . . . when he moves his hands that special way, or smiles that haunting smile, or gets a faraway look into his deep eyes.

Does he really like you, or is he only being polite?

Is he trying to turn you on, or off?

Is he too shy to tell you what's on his mind, or doesn't he have anything to say?

We can't help you with the secret love signals of the boy next door. But we can help you to identify the secret love signals of David Bruce Cassidy!

David, like most expressive people, sends out unspoken signals of what's going on in his mind. And, if you know what to look for, you can spot them easily. Here are some clues:

You can tell a lot about what a person is thinking by looking in his eyes. David's are a clear hazel, but they can change from green to almost brown, depending on the light he's in and the mood he's in. If David is looking at someone he really likes, his eyes will either soften romantically or twinkle with loving mischief.

David's mouth is also very expressive, especially when he smiles. His beautiful smile can have a certain tender curve to it that you just don't get to see in photographs!

The third signal to look for is David's hands. When he's talking to someone he likes, he makes enthusiastic gestures to emphasize what he's saying. And sometimes you can tell as much about his mood by the way he moves his hands as you can by what he's saying!

The photos on these pages capture David's strong but tender hands during a long, personal conversation with FLIP's Carol Deck. He and Carol are good friends, just as David is good friends with co-star Susan Dey. The photos capture David's affection for Carol, and his deep interest in their conversation.

If David were alone with one special girl, then his hands would probably be saying other things, making special moves. But these photos can give you a good idea of what those moves would be.

Someday, the girl David chooses to love will know those moves, and she alone will be able to pick up David's secret love signals.

David hasn't met that girl yet. She could be you.

And if it is, you'll have a head start.
